

Bahá'í Political Non-Involvement - Some Questions and Answers

What will be the value to Bahá'ís of a deeper study of the teachings regarding political non-involvement?

The Universal House of Justice wrote: These observations will not only help the friends to intelligently and radiantly follow the holy teachings on this matter, but will help them to explain the Bahá'í attitude to those who may question its wisdom and usefulness.

February 8, 1970 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

Should Bahá'ís even discuss political affairs?

'Abdu'l-Bahá is quoted, referring to Bahá'u'lláh: He hath even prohibited the believers from discussing political affairs.

To an individual, July 7, 1976 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 335

Why does it matter what a Bahá'í does, since we have promises in the Writings about the triumph of the Cause?

The Universal House of Justice states: The Army of the Cause, advancing at the bidding of the Lord, to conquer the hearts of men, can never be defeated, but its rate of advance can be slowed down by acts of unwisdom and ignorance on the part of its supporters.

February 8, 1970 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

What are the prophecies of Bahá'u'lláh about the future world order?

The Universal House of Justice states: Bahá'u'lláh wrote, "Soon will the present day order be rolled up and a new one spread out in its stead." "After a time," He further wrote, "all the governments on earth will change. Oppression will envelop the world. And following a universal convulsion the sun of justice will rise from the horizon of the unseen realm."

July 7, 1976, Messages from the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p.330

Has this universal convulsion already occurred?

The Guardian described the First World War as: "the first stage in a titanic convulsion long predicted by Bahá'u'lláh." He called the Second World War a: "tempest, unprecedented in its violence", and the "great and mighty wind of God invading the remotest and fairest regions of the earth." After the termination of this War and the creation of the United Nations, the Guardian wrote in 1948, anticipating "still more violent convulsions" and referred to the "wings of yet another conflict" destined to "darken the international horizon."

In 1957 he referred to: dire predictions made by Him Who is the unerring Interpreter of His teachings, all foreshadowing a universal commotion, of a scope and intensity unparalleled in the annals of mankind.

July 7, 1976, Messages from the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 pp.330-333

What are the signs of this universal commotion?

The Guardian describes: the signs and portents that must either herald or accompany the retributive calamity which, as decreed by Him Who is the Judge and Redeemer of mankind, must, sooner or later, afflict a society which, for the most part, and for over a century, has turned a deaf ear to the Voice of God's Messenger in this day...

as being: The violent derangement of the world's equilibrium; the trembling that will seize the limbs of mankind; the radical transformation of human society; the rolling up of the present-day Order; the fundamental changes affecting the structure of government; the weakening of the pillars of religion; the rise of dictatorships; the spread of tyranny; the fall of monarchies; the decline of ecclesiastical institutions; the increase of anarchy and chaos; the extension and consolidation of the Movement of the Left; the fanning into flame of the smoldering fire of racial strife; the development of infernal engines of war; the burning of cities; the contamination of the atmosphere of the earth.

Messages to the Baha'i World - 1950-1957 p. 103

What will be the effect of this calamity?

The Guardian states that this calamity; must purge the human race of the dross of its age long corruptions, and weld its component parts into a firmly-knit world-embracing Fellowship...."

Messages to the Baha'i World 1950-1957 p. 103

Will mankind survive this disruptive period?

The Guardian, referring to humanity, stated: Its present state, indeed even its immediate future, is dark, distressingly dark. Its distant future, however, is radiant, gloriously radiant—so radiant that no eye can visualize it.

The Promised Day is Come p.116

He also assured us that: God's purpose... is none other than to usher in, in ways He alone can bring about, and the full significance of which He alone can fathom, the Great, the Golden Age of a long-divided, a long-afflicted humanity.

The Promised Day is Come p.116

How can the great Plan of God be described?

The Universal House of Justice has stated: God's Major Plan is the plan for humanity that He Himself directs, that is tumultuous in its progress, that works through humanity as a whole and welds humankind into a unified body through the fires of suffering and tribulation. Its first goal is the Lesser Peace, the political unification of the world. Its ultimate object is the Kingdom of God on earth.

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 661

What will this process lead to?

The Universal House of Justice wrote: This process will produce, in God's due time, the Lesser Peace, the political unification of the world.

December 8, 1967 in Wellspring of Guidance pp. 133

What are the principle features of the Lesser Peace?

The Universal House of Justice describes it as: the political unification of the world. Mankind at that time can be likened to a body that is unified but without life.

December 8, 1967 in Wellspring of Guidance pp.131-136

How does work of the Bahá'ís relate to the processes of Peace?

The Universal House of Justice states: The Second process, the task of breathing life into this unified body—of creating true unity and spirituality culminating in the Most Great Peace—is that of the Bahá'ís, who are laboring consciously, with detailed instructions and continuing Divine guidance, to erect the fabric of the Kingdom of God on earth, into which they call their fellow men, thus conferring upon them eternal life.

Promoting Entry by Troops p. 9

Is the work of the Bahá'ís important?

The Universal House of Justice has written: The Minor Plan that He has given us to execute as our part in His grand design for the redemption of mankind, is clearly delineated. It is to this work that we must devote all our energies, for there is no one else to do it.

Promoting Entry by Troops p. 9

What could be achieved if the world's best statesmen got together, and applied themselves with supreme effort to solve mankind's problems?

The Guardian has written: Humanity, whether viewed in the light of man's individual conduct or in the existing relationships between organized communities and nations, has, alas, strayed too far and suffered too great a decline to be redeemed through the unaided efforts of the best among its recognized rulers and statesmen—however disinterested their motives, however concerted their action, however unsparing in their zeal and devotion to its cause.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 33

Can the schemes of the highest statesmanship succeed in laying a suitable foundation for the future?

The Guardian wrote: No scheme which the calculations of the highest statesmanship may yet devise; no doctrine which the most distinguished exponents of economic theory may hope to advance; no principle which the most ardent of moralists may strive to inculcate, can provide, in the last resort, adequate foundations upon which the future of a distracted world can be built.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 33

International co-operation is becoming more systematic and organized; can these measures bring stability to the world?

The Guardian has stated: "No appeal for mutual tolerance which the worldly-wise might raise, however compelling and insistent, can calm its passions or help restore its vigor. Nor would any general scheme of mere organized international cooperation, in whatever sphere of human activity, however ingenious in conception, or extensive in scope, succeed in removing the root cause of the evil that has so rudely upset the equilibrium of present-day society.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 34

The world seems headed toward political unification and economic interdependence; will these measures be enough?

The Guardian wrote: Not even, I venture to assert, would the very act of devising the machinery required for the political and economic unification of the world—a principle that has been increasingly advocated in recent times—provide in itself the antidote against the poison that is steadily undermining the vigor of organized peoples and nations.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 34

What else is needed?

The Guardian has written: What else, might we not confidently affirm, but the unreserved acceptance of the Divine program enunciated, with such simplicity and force as far back as sixty years ago, by Bahá'u'lláh, embodying in its essentials God's divinely appointed scheme for the unification of mankind in this age, coupled with an indomitable conviction in the unflinching efficacy of each and all of its provisions, is eventually capable of withstanding the forces of internal disintegration which, if unchecked, must needs continue to eat into the vitals of a despairing society.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 34

What are the ills with which the world is now afflicted?

The Guardian refers to: the ominous manifestations of acute political conflict, of social unrest, of racial animosity, of class antagonism, of immorality and of irreligion, proclaiming, in no uncertain terms, the corruption and obsolescence of the institutions of a bankrupt Order.

July 7, 1976, Messages from the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p.330

What are the distinguishing features of the trouble in the world today?

The Universal House of Justice wrote: It has become clearer still that, in different nations in different ways, the social consensus around ideals that have traditionally united and bound together a people is increasingly worn and spent. It can no longer offer a reliable defense against a variety of self-serving, intolerant, and toxic ideologies that feed upon discontent and resentment. With a conflicted world appearing every day less sure of itself, the proponents of these destructive doctrines grow bold and brazen. We recall the unequivocal verdict from the Supreme Pen: "They hasten forward to Hell Fire, and mistake it for light." Well-meaning leaders of nations and people of goodwill are left struggling to repair the fractures evident in society and powerless to prevent their spread. The effects of all this are not only to be seen in outright conflict or a collapse in order. In the distrust that pits neighbor against neighbor and severs family ties, in the antagonism of so much of what passes for social discourse, in the casualness with which appeals to ignoble human motivations are used to win power and pile up riches—in all these lie unmistakable signs that the moral force which sustains society has become gravely depleted.

To the Bahá'ís of the World, Ridván 2015

What is the first step which must be taken to solve the world's problems?

The Universal House of Justice writes: When Bahá'u'lláh proclaimed His Message to the world in the nineteenth century He made it abundantly clear — that the first step essential for the peace and progress of mankind was its unification. As He says, "The well-being of mankind, its peace and security are unattainable unless and until its 'unity is firmly established."

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

Is this a generally accepted view, or do most people have a different set of priorities?

The Universal House of Justice wrote: To this day, however, you will find most people take the opposite point of view: they look upon unity as an ultimate, almost unattainable goal and concentrate first on remedying all the other ills of mankind. If they did but know it, these other ills are but various symptoms and side effects of the basic disease—disunity.

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

How does religion relate to the unification of mankind?

The Universal House of Justice states: Bahá'u'lláh has, furthermore, stated that the revivification of mankind and the curing of all its ills can be achieved only through the instrumentality of His Faith. "That which the Lord hath ordained as the sovereign remedy and mightiest instrument for the healing of all the world is the union of all its peoples in one universal Cause, one common Faith. This can in no wise be achieved except through the power of a skilled, an all-powerful and inspired Physician. This, verily, is the truth, and all else naught but error."

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

How will the Bahá'í World Order solve these many problems?

The Universal House of Justice writes, about the individual believer: As that Order grows in strength and influence, he will see the power of that Message transforming the whole of human society and progressively solving the problems and removing the injustices which have so long bedeviled the world.

To an individual, July 7, 1976 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 335

What is the best course of action for a Bahá'í to take?

The Universal House of Justice has written: The best way Bahá'ís can serve the highest interests of their country and the cause of the salvation for the world, is to sacrifice their political pursuits and affiliations and wholeheartedly and fully support the divine system of Bahá'u'lláh.

The Guardian has stated: The Bahá'ís must turn all their forces into the channel of building up the Bahá'í Cause and its administration. They can neither change nor help the world in any other way at present. If they become involved in the issues the governments of the world are struggling over, they will be lost. But if they build up the Bahá'í pattern they can offer it as a remedy when all else has failed. We must build up our Bahá'í system, and leave the faulty systems of the world to go their way. We cannot change them through becoming involved in them; on the contrary, they will destroy us.

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

Is it not likely that a Bahá'í would be regarded as being aloof from the real problems of the world?

The Universal House of Justice writes: "Bahá'ís are often accused of holding aloof from the 'real problems' of their fellow-men. When we hear this accusation let us not forget that those who make it are usually idealistic materialists to whom material good is the only 'real' good, whereas we know that the working of the material world is merely a reflection of Spiritual Conditions and until the spiritual conditions can be changed there can be no lasting change for the better in material affairs."

July 7, 1976, Messages from the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p.330

What is the approach used by those "idealistic materialists" in an attempt to improve the condition of the world?

The Universal House of Justice has written: Most people have no clear concept of the sort of world they wish to build, nor how to go about building it. Even those who are concerned to improve conditions are therefore reduced to combating every apparent evil that takes their attention.

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

How do many people judge a person's moral worth?

The Universal House of Justice states: Willingness to fight against evils, whether, in the form of conditions or embodied in evil men, has thus become for most people the touch-stone by which they judge a person's moral worth.

To an individual, July 7, 1976 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 334

How does the Bahá'í approach differ from that of most other people?

The Universal House of Justice writes: Bahá'ís, on the other hand, know the goal they are working towards and know what they must do, step by step, to attain it. Their whole energy is directed towards the building of the good, a good which has such a positive strength that in the face of it the multitude of evils - which are in essence negative - will fade away and be no more.

To an individual believer, December 8, 1967, Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

Should a Bahá'í try to combat every apparent evil in the world?

The Universal House of Justice has written: To enter into the quixotic tournament of demolishing one by one the evils in the world is, to a Bahá'í, a vain waste of time and effort. His whole life is directed towards proclaiming the Message of Bahá'u'lláh, reviving the spiritual life of his fellow-men, uniting them in a divinely-created World Order.

To an individual, July 7, 1976 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 335

What is the Bahá'í principle of noninterference in political affairs?

The Guardian writes: We should—every one of us—remain aloof, in heart and in mind, in words and in deeds, from the political affairs and disputes of the Nations and of Governments. We should keep ourselves away from such thoughts. We should have no political connection with any of the parties and should join no faction of these different and warring sects.

Absolute impartiality in the matter of political parties should be shown by words and by deeds, and the love of the whole humanity, whether a Government or a nation, which is the basic teaching of Bahá'u'lláh, should also be shown by words and by deeds...

According to the exhortations of the Supreme Pen and the confirmatory explanations of the Covenant of God Bahá'ís are in no way allowed to enter into political affairs under any pretense of excuse; since such an action brings about disastrous results and ends in hurting the Cause of God and its intimate friends."

We see therefore that we must do two things -- Shun politics like the plague, and be obedient to the Government in power in the place where we reside... We must obey in all cases except where a spiritual principle is involved, such as denying our Faith. For these spiritual principles we must be willing to die.

Shoghi Effendi, Directives from the Guardian pp.56-57

Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or by deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties and factions.

Shoghi Effendi, World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, p. 64

'Abdu'l-Bahá is quoted, referring to Bahá'u'lláh: He hath forbidden them (the believers) to interfere at all with political problems.

Quoted in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 333

What about political controversies?

The Guardian wrote: In such controversies they should assign no blame, take no side, further no design, and identify themselves with no system prejudicial to the best interests of that world-wide Fellowship which it is their aim to guard and foster.

With political crises increasing, the Guardian called upon Bahá'is to: public resolve, despite (the) pressure (of) fast crystallizing opinion, (to) abstain individually and collectively, in word (and) action, informally as well as in all official utterances and publications, from assigning blame, taking sides, however indirectly, in recurring political crises now agitating (and) ultimately engulfing human society.

Directives from the Guardian pp. 54-57

How do Bahá'is serve the highest interests of the country they belong to?

The Guardian stated: It should be made unmistakably clear that such an attitude implies neither the slightest indifference to the cause and interests of their own country, nor involves any insubordination on their part to the authority of recognized and established governments. Nor does it constitute a repudiation of their sacred obligation to promote, in the most effective manner, the best interests of their government and people. It indicates the desire cherished by every true and loyal follower of Bahá'u'lláh to serve, in an unselfish, unostentatious and patriotic fashion, the highest interests of the country to which he belongs, and in a way that would entail no departure from the high standards of integrity and truthfulness associated with the teachings of his Faith.

Is the Bahá'í Faith opposed to any party?

The Universal House of Justice has written: The Faith is not opposed to the true interests of any nation, nor is it against any party or faction. It holds aloof from all controversies and transcends them all.

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 164

Should we form any connection with a party?

The Guardian wrote: We should have no political connection with any of the parties and should join no faction of these different and warring sects.

Directives from the Guardian pp. 54-57

What should be our attitude toward political parties?

The Guardian has stated that: “Absolute impartiality in the matter of political parties should be shown by words and by deeds, and the love of the whole humanity, whether a Government or a nation, which is the basic teaching of Bahá'u'lláh, should also be shown by words and by deeds...”

Directives from the Guardian pp. 54-57

Is the Bahá'í Faith compatible with any political party?

The Guardian has written: To some of the principles and ideals animating political and ecclesiastical institutions every conscientious follower of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh can, no doubt, readily subscribe. With none of these institutions, however, can he identify himself, nor can he unreservedly endorse the creeds, the principles and programs on which they are based. He is above all else, the supporter of the principles enunciated by Bahá'u'lláh, with which, I am firmly convinced, the program of no political party is completely harmonious...

World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 199

The Universal House of Justice states: Membership in any political party, therefore, necessarily entails repudiation of some or all of the principles of peace and unity proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh. As 'Abdu'l-Bahá stated: “Our party is God's party; we do not belong to any party.

Letter of Universal House of Justice, February 8, 1970 Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

What role can the Bahá'í Faith play in ameliorating the plight of African American Males?

The Universal House of Justice has written: With regard to the question of what public role might be played by the Bahá'í Faith in America to ameliorate in the immediately foreseeable future the plight of African-American males the size and influence of the Bahá'í Community are, alas, too limited for it to have a determining impact on conditions.... This is not a counsel of despair. Nor is it an equivocation or a suggestion that the requirements of divine justice ought to be deferred. Nor is it to say that Bahá'ís have no critical role to play. On the contrary, the concern is with Bahá'í fundamentals, with looking deeply into underlying causes and identifying strategic lines of action which make the wisest use of our limited resources at this point in the development of the Bahá'í community.... As the House of Justice has been trying to get the friends to understand for some time, the necessary precondition to translation of our community's social vision into reality is a massive expansion in the number of committed, deepened believers who are well-grounded in the essentials of the Cause. Those who fail to comprehend the urgency assigned to the objective of achieving a large expansion have obviously failed to appreciate the moral imperative behind this aim.

The House of Justice sympathizes with your frustrations. It feels, however, that the best contribution which the friends can make is to carry on with the work of the kind you are already doing, demonstrating the Bahá'í spirit to others, showing their love for mankind and patiently, determinedly working to bring about change in the hearts and minds of those they are able to reach. It is a question of being in this struggle for the long term, of advancing the issue as much as feasible, given the conditions with which one has to work. In this respect, the powerful example of the Hand of the Cause Louis Gregory is an invaluable source of inspiration and encouragement.

Letter to an individual Apr 01, 1996

What is the consequence to a Bahá'í of his involving himself in politics?

The Guardian has warned: But if a certain person does enter into party politics and labors for the ascendancy of one party over another, and continues to do it against expressed appeals and warnings of the Assembly, then the Assembly has the right to refuse him the right to vote in Bahá'í elections,

Principles of Bahá'í Administration p.30

Would political involvement affect the unity within the Bahá'í community?

The Guardian wrote: We Bahá'ís are one the world over; we are seeking to build up a new World Order, divine in origin. How can we do this if every Bahá'í is a member of a different political party—some of them diametrically opposite to each other? Where is our unity then? We would be divided, because of politics, against ourselves, and this is the opposite of our purpose. Obviously if one Bahá'í in Austria is given freedom to choose a political party and join it, however good its aims may be, another Bahá'í in Japan or America, or India has the right to do the same thing and he might belong to a party the very opposite in principle to that which the Austrian Bahá'í belongs to. Where would be the unity of the Faith then? These two spiritual brothers would be working against each other because of their political affiliations (as the Christians of Europe have been doing in so many fratricidal wars).

Principles of Bahá'í Administration, pp. 24, 26-33

The Universal House of Justice states: If a Bahá'í were to insist on his right to support a certain political party he could not deny the same degree of freedom to other believers. This would mean that within the ranks of the Faith, whose primary mission is to unite all men as one great family under God, there would be Bahá'ís opposed to each other. Where, then, would be the example of unity and harmony which the world is seeking?

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 164

What possible effect could result from a Bahá'í involving himself in political matters?

The Universal House of Justice has written: an unwise act or statement by a Bahá'í in one country could result in a grave setback for the Faith there or elsewhere— and even loss of the lives of fellow believers.

December 8, 1967 in Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

How could political involvement create difficulties for the Faith in another country?

The Guardian has written: The very extension of the activities in which we are engaged, and the variety of the communities which labor under divers forms of government, so essentially different in their standards, policies, and methods, make it absolutely essential for all those who are the declared members of any one of these communities to avoid any action that might, by arousing the suspicion or exciting the antagonism of any one government, involve their brethren in fresh persecutions or complicate the nature of their task.

World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 66

The Universal House of Justice wrote: ...if the institutions of the Faith, God forbid, became involved in politics, the Bahá'ís would find themselves arousing antagonism instead of love. If they took a stand in one country, they would be bound to change the views of the people in another country about the aims and purposes of the Faith. By becoming involved in political disputes, the Bahá'ís instead of changing the world or helping it, would themselves be lost and destroyed

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 164

To what extent should the principle of non-involvement in politics be applied today?

The Guardian states: These directing and regulating principles of Bahá'í belief the upholders of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh feel bound, as their Administrative Order expands and consolidates itself, to assert and vigilantly apply. The exigencies of a slowly crystallizing Faith impose upon them a duty which they cannot shirk, a responsibility they cannot evade. The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 66

What do we do if we are unsure about taking a course of action?

The Universal House of Justice states: The principles in the Writings are clear, but usually it is when these principles are applied that questions arise. In all cases where the correct course of action is not clear believers should consult their National Spiritual Assembly who will exercise their judgment in advising the friends on the best course to follow. Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963-1986 p. 166

What is meant by political non-involvement?

Shoghi Effendi wrote: There is one fundamental point which Shoghi Effendi wishes me to emphasize. By the principal of non-interference in political matters we must not mean that only corrupt politics and partial and sectarian politics are to be avoided. But that pronouncement on any current system of politics connected with any government must be shunned. We should not only take side with no political party, group or system actually in use, but we should also refuse to commit ourselves to any statement which may be interpreted as being sympathetic or antagonistic to any existing political organization or philosophy. The attitude of the Bahá'ís must be one of complete aloofness. They are neither for nor against any system of politics. Not that they are the ill-wishers of their respective governments but that due to certain basic considerations arising out of their teachings and of the administrative machinery of their Faith they prefer not to get entangled in political affairs and to be misinterpreted and misunderstood by their countrymen.

*In the light of this principle it becomes clear that to contribute articles on current political affairs to any newspaper must inevitably lead the writer to express, directly or in an indirect manner, his view and his criticisms on the subject. He is, in addition, always liable to be misinterpreted and misunderstood by the politicians. The best thing to do, therefore, is simply not to write on current policies at all.

on behalf of the Shoghi Effendi to an individual believer, March 2, 1934, Lights of Guidance p. 451

Are there promises of aid from Bahá'u'lláh in implementing this principle?

The Guardian has written: Difficult and delicate though be our task, the sustaining power of Bahá'u'lláh and of His Divine guidance will assuredly assist us if we follow steadfastly in His way, and strive to uphold the integrity of His laws. The light of His redeeming grace, which no earthly power can obscure, will if we persevere, illuminate our path, as we steer our course amid the snares and pitfalls of a troubled age, and will enable us to discharge our duties in a manner that would redound to the glory and the honor of His blessed Name. The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 64-67, 199

In the future, will politicians try to enlist Bahá'í support?

The Guardian states: As the number of the Bahá'í communities in various parts of the world multiplies and their power, as a social force, becomes increasingly apparent, they will no doubt find themselves increasingly subjected to the pressure which men of authority and influence, in the political domain, will exercise in the hope of obtaining the support they require for the advancement of their aims. The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 65

Why should Bahá'ís beware of compromising their principles for benefits they could obtain from a government?

The Guardian warns: These communities will, moreover, feel a growing need of the good-will and the assistance of their respective governments in their efforts to widen the scope, and to consolidate the foundations, of the institutions committed to their charge. Let them beware lest, in their eagerness to further the aims of their beloved Cause, they should be led unwittingly to bargain with their Faith, to compromise with their essential principles, or to sacrifice, in return for any material advantage which their institutions may derive, the integrity of their spiritual ideals. The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 65

Do American Bahá'ís vote?

'Abdu'l-Bahá has written: Thou hast asked regarding the political affairs. In the United States it is necessary that the citizens shall take part in elections. This is a necessary matter and no excuse from it is possible. My object in telling the believers that they should not interfere in the affairs of government is this: That they should not make any trouble and that they should not move against the opinion of the government, but obedience to the laws and the administration of the commonwealth is necessary. Now, as the government of America is a republican form of government, it is necessary that all the citizens shall take part in the elections of officers and take part in the affairs of the republic.

Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá Vol.2 p. 342

How does a Bahá'í vote in a civic election?

The Guardian wrote: The Friends may vote, if they can do it, without identifying themselves with one party or another. To enter the arena of party politics is surely detrimental to the best interests of the Faith and will harm the Cause.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration pp. 24, 26-33

Does such a vote imply acceptance of the program of a political party?

The Guardian has written: No Bahá'í vote for an officer nor Bahá'í participation in the affairs of the Republic shall involve acceptance by that individual of a program or policy that contravenes any vital principle, spiritual or social, of the Faith... I feel it incumbent upon me to clarify the above statement, written on my behalf; by stating that no vote cast, or office undertaken, by a Bahá'í should necessarily constitute acceptance, by the voter or office holder, of the entire program of any political party.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration, pp. 24, 26-33

Upon what basis should a Bahá'í cast his vote in a civil election?

The Guardian stated: It remains for the individuals to so use their right to vote as to keep aloof from party politics, and always bear in mind that they are voting on the merits of the Individual, rather than because he belongs to one party or another. The matter must be made perfectly clear to the individuals, who will be left free to exercise their discretion and judgment.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration pp. 24, 26-33

Should the Faith publish articles which give a detailed analysis of controversial issues?

The Guardian has written: Touching the publication of articles and pamphlets bearing on the controversial and political issues of the day, I desire to remind my dearly-beloved fellow-workers that at the present stage when the Cause is still in its infancy, any minute and detailed analyses by the friends of subjects that are in the forefront of general discussion would often be misconstrued in certain quarters and give rise to suspicions and misunderstandings that would react unfavorably on the Cause. They would tend to create a misconception of the real object, the true mission, and the fundamental character of the Bahá'í Faith.

Bahá'í Administration p. 102

Can the Bahá'ís criticize the present social and political order?

On behalf of the Guardian it is written: There is, however, one case in which one can criticize the present social and political order without being necessarily forced to side with or oppose any existing regime. And this is the method adopted by the Guardian in his Goal of a new World Order. His criticisms of the world conditions beside being very general in character are abstract; that is, instead of condemning existing institutional organizations it goes deeper and analyzes the basic ideas and conceptions which have been responsible for their establishment. This being a mere intellectual and philosophical approach to the problem of world political crisis, there is no objection if you wish to try such a method, which immediately carries you from the field of practical politics to that of political theory. But in view of the fact that no clear-cut line can be drawn between theory and practice you should be extremely careful not to make too free a use of such method."

From a letter written on behalf of the Shoghi Effendi to an individual believer, March 2, 1934, Lights of Guidance p. 451

What are some guidelines for public presentations in connection with the Faith?

The Guardian stated: We should, while endeavoring to uphold loyally and expound conscientiously our social and moral principles in all their essence and purity, in all their bearings upon the divers phases of human society, insure that no direct reference or particular criticism in our exposition of the fundamentals of the Faith would tend to antagonize any existing institution, or help to identify a purely spiritual movement with the base clamorings and contentions of warring sects, factions, and nations.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration, pp. 24, 26-33

What approach should we use in our public utterances, written or verbal ?

The Guardian wrote: We should strive in all our utterances to combine the discretion and noble reticence of the wise with the frankness and passionate loyalty of the ardent advocate of an inspiring Faith. While refusing to utter the word that would needlessly alienate or estrange any individual, government, or people, we should fearlessly and unhesitatingly uphold and assert in their entirety such truths the knowledge of which we believe is vitally and urgently needed for the good and betterment of mankind.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration, pp. 24, 26-33

Does the principle of non-involvement in politics affect our general proclamation and administrative activities?

The Guardian has written: Whether it be in the publications which they initiate and supervise; or in their official and public deliberations; or in the posts they occupy and the services they render; or in the communications they address to their fellow-disciples; or in their dealings with men of eminence and authority; or in their affiliations with kindred societies and organizations, it is, I am firmly convinced, their first and sacred obligation to abstain from any word or deed that might be construed as a violation of this vital principle.

World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 164

What should be our attitude toward the policies of the government?

The Guardian advised the Bahá'ís in these words: Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or by deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties, and faction

World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 64

What should we do when controversies arise as a result of government policies?

The Guardian stated: In such controversies they should assign no blame, take no side, further no design, and identify themselves with no system prejudicial to the best interests of that world-wide Fellowship which it is their aim to guard and foster.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 64-67, 199

Likewise, the Universal House of Justice has written, concerning the Faith: It holds aloof from all controversies and transcends them all, while enjoining upon its followers loyalty to government and a sane patriotism.

February 8, 1970 Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

Why would a Bahá'í be led to involve himself in politics?

The Universal House of Justice has written: It is often through our misguided feeling that we can somehow aid our fellows better by some activity outside the Faith, that Bahá'ís are led to indulge in politics

December 8, 1967 Wellspring of Guidance pp. 131-136

What are the spiritual consequences of compromising the principle of non-involvement in politics ?

The Guardian warned of: Grave apprehension lest cumulative effect (of) such compromises (should) disintegrate (the) fabric, clog (the) channel of grace that sustains (the) system of God's essentially supranational, supernatural order so laboriously evolved, so recently established."

Directives from the Guardian pp. 54-57

What challenges could Bahá'ís face in upholding the principle of non-involvement in politics?

The Guardian warned: Neither the charges which the uninformed and the malicious may be led to bring against them, nor the allurements of honors and rewards, will ever induce them to surrender their trust or to deviate from their path. Let their words proclaim, and their conduct testify, that they who follow Bahá'u'lláh, in whatever land they reside, are actuated by no selfish ambition, that they neither thirst for power, nor mind any wave of unpopularity, of distrust or criticism, which a strict adherence to their standards might provoke.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p. 66

How do Bahá'ís speak of the world's leaders and governments?

'Abdu'l-Bahá says: ... Except to speak well of them, make thou no mention of the earth's kings, and the worldly governments thereof.
Selections from the Writings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 92

What is the Bahá'í attitude toward the government?

The Guardian points out to Bahá'ís: Theirs is the duty to demonstrate, on one hand, their unqualified loyalty and obedience to whatever is the considered judgment of their respective governments.
The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 64-67, 199

The Guardian also states: “The attitude of the Bahá'ís must be two-fold, complete obedience to the government of the country they reside in, and no interference whatsoever in political matters or questions.

and again: “The cardinal principle which we must follow.. is obedience to the government prevailing in any land in which we reside....

“We see therefore that We must do two things—Shun politics like the plague, and be obedient to the Government in power in the place where we reside.

Directives from the Guardian pp. 54-57

The Universal House of Justice, referring initially to statements of Bahá'u'lláh, and then to statements of 'Abdu'l-Bahá writes: This same Physician, addressing His followers, “the beloved of the one true God”, wrote: “Forbear ye from concerning yourselves with the affairs of this world and all that pertaineth unto it, or from meddling with the activities of those who are its outward leaders. The one true God, exalted be His glory, hath bestowed the government of the earth upon the kings. To none is given the right to act in any manner that would run counter to the considered views of them who are in authority.” In another Tablet He laid on His followers the obligation to “behave towards the government of the country in which they reside with loyalty, honesty and truthfulness.” 'Abdu'l-Bahá reaffirmed the same principles. When in America He explained: “The essence of the Bahá'í spirit is that in order to establish a better social order and economic condition, there must be allegiance to the laws and principles of government.”

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 333

And finally in His last Will and Testament He ['Abdu'l-Bahá] wrote: “We must obey and be the well-wishers of the government of the land....”

To an individual, July 7, 1976 in Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 335

In what government positions could a Bahá'í seek employment?

The Universal House of Justice states: Working in the administrative channels of the government instead of through party politics or in diplomatic or political posts.
Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

How can Bahá'ís decide which employment posts are acceptable?

The Guardian wrote: It is their duty to strive to distinguish, as clearly as they possibly can, and if needed with the aid of their elected representatives, such posts and functions as are either diplomatic or political from those that are purely administrative in character, and which under no circumstances are affected by the changes and chances that political activities and party government, in every land, must necessarily involve.
The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 64-67, 199

Do we only obey a just government?

The Guardian wrote: What the Master's statement really means is obedience to a duly constituted government, whatever that government may be in form. We are not the ones, as individual Bahá'ís, to judge our government as just or unjust — for each believer would be sure to hold a different viewpoint, and within our own Bahá'í fold a hotbed of dissension would spring up and destroy our unity.

Directives from the Guardian p. 56

Does our obedience extend to the administrative regulations which may be promulgated by civil authorities?

The Guardian stated, referring to the Bahá'ís who were at that time being restricted in Persia: To all administrative regulations which the civil authorities have issued from time to time, or will issue in the future in that land, as in all other countries, the Bahá'í community, faithful to its sacred obligations towards its government, and conscious of its civic duties, has yielded, and will continue to yield implicit obedience.

God Passes By p. 371

When Federal and State laws or government policies appear to differ, are we free to decide to obey only the Federal law?

The Universal House of Justice has stated: Bahá'ís obey the law. Federal or state, unless submission to these laws amounts to a denial of their Faith. We live the Bahá'í life, fully and continuously unless prevented by authorities. This implies, if it does not categorically state, that a Bahá'í is not required to make a judgment as to the precedence of Federal or state law — this is for the courts to decide."

U.S. National Bahá'í Review, No. 52, August 1970 p. 1

Do we obey the government even when it restricts our administrative activities ?

The Guardian has written: the guiding principles of Bahá'í conduct that in connection with their administrative activities, no matter how grievously interference with them might affect the course of the extension of the Movement, and the suspension of which does not constitute in itself a departure from the principle of loyalty to their Faith, the considered judgment and authoritative decrees issued by their responsible rulers must, if they be faithful to Bahá'u'lláh's and 'Abdu'l-Bahá's express injunctions, be thoroughly respected and loyally obeyed.

Bahá'í Administration p. 162

Is there any limit to the extent of our obedience to the government?

The Guardian has written: ...We must obey in all cases except where a spiritual principle is involved, such as denying our Faith. For these spiritual principles we must be willing to die.

The Guardian has stated: In matters, however, that vitally affect the integrity and honor of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, and are tantamount to a recantation of their faith and repudiation of their inner-most belief, they are convinced, and are unhesitatingly prepared to 'vindicate by their life-blood the sincerity of their conviction, that no power on earth, neither the arts of the most insidious adversary nor the bloody weapons of the most tyrannical oppressor, can ever succeed in extorting from them a word or deed that might tend to stifle the voice of their conscience or tarnish the purity of their faith.

Bahá'í Administration p. 162

and again: To such orders, however, as are tantamount to a recantation of their faith by its members, or constitute an act of disloyalty to its spiritual, its basic and God-given principles and precepts, it will stubbornly refuse to bow, preferring imprisonment, deportation and all manner of persecution, including death—as already suffered by the twenty thousand martyrs that have laid down their lives in the path of its Founders—rather than follow the dictates of a temporal authority requiring it to renounce its allegiance to its cause.

God Passes By p. 372

Some of the issues that governments are struggling with seem to be moral issues; should we involve ourselves in these issues?

The Guardian has written: What we Bahá'ís must face is the fact that society is disintegrating so rapidly that moral issues -which were clear a half century ago are now hopelessly confused and what is more, thoroughly mixed up with battling political interests. That is why the Bahá'ís must turn all their forces into the channel of building up the Bahá'í Cause and its Administration. They can neither change nor help the world in any other way at present. If they become involved in the issues the governments of the world are struggling over, they will be lost. But if they build up the Bahá'í pattern they can offer it as a remedy when all else has failed.

Directives from the Guardian p. 57

Does the attitude of Bahá'ís imply any lack of concern for the country, or any lack of love for their country?

The Guardian emphasizes: It should be made unmistakably clear that such an attitude implies neither the slightest indifference to the cause and interests of their own country, nor involves any insubordination on their part to the authority of recognized and established governments. Nor does it constitute a repudiation of their sacred obligation to promote, in the most effective manner, the best interests of their government and people. It indicates the desire cherished by every true and loyal follower of Bahá'u'lláh to serve, in an unselfish, unostentatious and patriotic fashion, the highest interests of the country to which lie belongs, and in a way that would entail no departure from the high standards of integrity and truthfulness associated with the teachings of his Faith.

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh pp. 64-67, 199

The Universal House of Justice has stated: This love for their country the Bahá'ís show by serving its well-being in their daily activity, or by working in the administrative channels of the government instead of through party politics or in diplomatic or political posts.

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 164

What concept of social life is implicit in the Bahá'í teachings on obedience to government ?

The Guardian has written: The Bahá'í conception of social life is essentially based on the subordination of the individual will to that of society. It neither suppresses the individual nor does it exalt him to the point of making him an anti-social creature, a menace to society. As in everything, it follows the "golden mean." The only way that society can function is for the minority to follow the will of the majority.

Directives from the Guardian p. 53

Is it appropriate for Bahá'ís to associate with progressive social movements ?

The Guardian is quoted by the Universal House of Justice, as having written: "Much as the friends must guard against in any way ever seeming to identify themselves or the Cause with any political party, they must also guard against the other extreme of never taking part with other progressive groups, in conferences or committees designed to promote some activity in entire accord with our teachings such as, for instance, better race relations,"

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 335

Are there some social movements with which we should not associate ?

The Guardian wrote: Fully aware of the repeated statements of 'Abdu'l-Bahá that universality is of God, Bahá'ís in every land are ready, nay anxious to associate themselves by word and deed with any association of men which, after careful scrutiny, they feel satisfied is free from every tinge of partisanship and wholly devoted to the interests of all mankind.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration pp. 24, 26—33

What is the primary purpose of such association with such modern social movements?

The Guardian pointed out: It is surely very necessary that the friends should keep in touch with the modern social movements, but their main objective should be to draw more people to the spirit and teachings of the Cause. They should learn from the experience of others and not permit themselves to go off at a tangent, and finally be so absorbed in other movements as to forget the Cause of God.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration p.26

How can we use this contact to further promote the Faith?

The Guardian wrote: We should welcome and seize every opportunity that presents itself, however modest it may be, to give a wider publicity to the Cause, to demonstrate its all-inclusiveness and liberal attitude, its independence and purity, without committing ourselves, whether by word or deed, to programs or politics that are not in strict conformity with the tenets of the Faith.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration p.26

Should Bahá'ís engage in works of social relief and charity?

The Guardian has written, through his Secretary, to an individual: He feels that, although your desire to partake actively of the dangers and miseries afflicting so many millions of people today, is natural, and a noble impulse, there can be no comparison between the value of Bahá'í work and any other form of service to humanity. If the Bahá'ís could evaluate their work properly they would see that, whereas other forms of relief work are superficial in character, alleviating the sufferings and ills of men for a short time at best, the work they are doing is to lay the foundation of a new spiritual Order in the world founded on the Word of God, operating according to the Laws He has laid down in this age. No one else can do this work except those who have fully realized the meaning of the Message of Bahá'u'lláh, whereas almost any courageous, sincere person can engage in relief work, etc. The believers are building a refuge for mankind. This is their supreme, sacred task, and they should devote every moment they can to this task.

Principles of Bahá'í Administration pp. 24, 26—33

What can Bahá'ís do when they feel anguish at the plight of humanity?

The Universal House of Justice states, Because love for our fellowmen and anguish at their plight are essential parts of a true Bahá'í's life, we are continually drawn to do what we can to help them. It is vitally important that we do so whenever the occasion presents itself, for our actions must say the same thing as our words—but this compassion for our fellows must not be allowed to divert our energies into channels which are ultimately doomed to failure, causing us to neglect the most important and fundamental work of all. There are hundreds of thousands of well-wishers of mankind who devote their lives to works of relief and charity, but a pitiful few to do the work which God Himself most wants done: the spiritual awakening and regeneration of mankind.... It is often through our misguided feeling that we can somehow aid our fellows better by some activity outside the Faith, that Bahá'ís are led to indulge in politics. This is a dangerous delusion.

Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1963 to 1986 p. 128

Should Bahá'ís associate with politicians?

The Universal House of Justice wrote: The Bahá'ís may, indeed are encouraged to, mix with all strata of society, with the highest authorities and with leading personalities as well as with the mass of the people, and should bring the knowledge of the Faith to them; but in so doing they should strictly avoid becoming identified, or identifying the Faith, with political pursuits and party programs.

February 8, 1970 Messages of the Universal House of Justice 1968-1975 pp. 44-50

What pitfalls are to be avoided in such association?

The Guardian warned the believers: Let them beware lest they allow themselves to become the tools of unscrupulous politicians, or to be entrapped by the treacherous devices of the plotters and the perfidious among their countrymen. The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh p.64

Is it appropriate to mention a political figure in a Bahá'í public talk?

The Guardian wrote, through his Secretary: The Guardian wishes me to draw the attention of the Friends through you that they should be very careful in their public addresses not to mention any political figures—either side with them or denounce them. This is the first thing to bear in mind. Otherwise they will involve the friends in political matters, which is infinitely dangerous to the Cause.
